5/5/24, 4:02 PM Outlier

X NR ▼

Truthfulness Rating Rubric

Always take the extra time to confirm that the information in the response is accurate. Don't let the Al fool you! It's totally okay to spend 10-15 minutes on fact-checking while working on a task.

Criteria	1 (Cannot Assess)	2 (N/A - Not Applicable)	3 (Major Issues)	4 (Minor Issues)	5 (No Issues)
Truthfulness The extent to which the information presented is accurate, reliable, and aligns with established facts or evidence.	More than 15 minutes required to research claims. Unable to verify the validity of claims. Response dodges the question with a punt such as "I am not able to answer."	No verifiable claims, calculations, or opinions presented as facts - for ex: "I like clouds"	One or more central claims crucial to the response's conclusion or thesis are incorrect. Two or more supporting pieces of evidence are false. Conclusive counterfactual information is easily found via Google.	All central claims are accurate but may include up to one incorrect supporting point. Incorrect supporting points do not significantly alter the core argument. Some claims are controversial and not universally accepted but presented as fact.	All central and supporting claims are correct and verifiable. Controversial or generalized statements include necessary caveats to avoid misinterpretation. Information aligns with trusted sources and is readily verifiable. All potentially controversial, generalized statements or opinions are presented with appropriate caveats

Need Help?

Back

Continue